Description:

 is a platform that reframes a 24m² apartment located in the Jordaan, Amsterdam, into a 24hour residency and the opening concluding it.

 focuses on creating an intimate and collaborative site of working and showing (displaying?): starting through the encounter of host and resident, each residency concludes with an opening, a moment of further share with the audience that becomes as well part of the process of creating.

 Those who know something engage with those who know something else, for an ongoing process leaving residue with which the next residency will proceed.

 aims to generate encounters between social, theoretical, and practical knowledge.

 will take care of food and other basic facilities during the residency and the opening of the house. The resident is invited to stay over for the night in the resident room. There is space for one resident at a time.

By now  has no name. This might happen in time.
